(a) Up to and including 1958 average rainfall for each year (represented by 100) is the average over the period 1911–1942. As from 1st January, 1959 a long period average from a selection of representative stations is used.

SEASONAL CONDITIONS, TASMANIA: MAY, 1963

Rainfall: All areas of the State except the East Coast reported below normal rainfall during May, 1963. The departures from normal were greatest in the North West where the Burnie—Devonport—Erriba triangle received less than 20% of the average amount. The Northern Midlands, Derwent Valley and areas east of Hobart received falls of less than 1 inch.

The only area of the State to receive in excess of 2 inches was a narrow strip, along the East Coast. The maximum rainfall recorded was 424 points at St. Marys.

Temperatures: Only a few isolated Northern stations reported maxima which were normal or slightly above. Progressing southwards, negative departures gradually increased reaching a peak of as much as four degrees below average in the Southeast. Most centres along the Northwest Coast and in Northern and Eastern districts reported mean maxima above 57 degrees. In Central districts mean maxima were around 48 degrees and in the Southeast they only rose to the low fifties. The highest mean maximum was 60.7 at Bicheno.

Frosts and Snow: Frosts, which were reported in all districts were severe in inland areas. On the 22nd snow fell in Southern and Western areas. On 23rd, 2½ inches was reported on the Lyell Highway at Derwent Bridge. Further falls were reported on 26th and 28th of the Month.

Crops and Pastures etc.,: Pastures and forage crops were all showing signs of adverse seasonal conditions and some properties were hand feeding much earlier than usual.

Good rains in January had allowed some forage crops to develop but later grown crops were nearly dormant except in the North-east where adequate rain fell during the season.
